

The Parkinson's Project

Are you or someone you know living with Parkinson's disease?

Are you interested in getting connected to the appropriate medical professional for the personalized care necessary for living well with Parkinson's?

Northwest Parkinson's Foundation is partnering with the University of Washington and the VA to better connect South King County communities of color with one-on-one social services and health care professionals. We're here so no one walks the Parkinson's journey alone.

If you're interested in learning more about the Parkinson's Project and the resources offered by NW Parkinson's, contact Jordan Whitley at:

206.946.6520 or Jordan@NWPF.org

The Parkinson's Project

Are you or someone you know living with Parkinson's disease?

Are you interested in getting connected to the appropriate medical professional for the personalized care necessary for living well with Parkinson's?

Northwest Parkinson's Foundation is partnering with the University of Washington and the VA to better connect South King County communities of color with one-on-one social services and health care professionals. We're here so no one walks the Parkinson's journey alone.

If you're interested in learning more about the Parkinson's Project and the resources offered by NW Parkinson's, contact Jordan Whitley at:

206.946.6520 or Jordan@NWPF.org