- Metro has been awarded a grant to pilot on-demand flexible service in Federal Way to help people access Federal Way Transit Center when Link light rail comes in 2024.
- Metro's on-demand flexible services, like Via to Transit and Ride Pingo to Transit, allow riders to access high-frequency transit without needing a car and often serve areas that are difficult or unsafe to walk or bike.

- Riders will be able to request an on-demand ride using an app or by calling a call center. Passengers can get picked up steps from their front doors, and travel to/from Federal Way Transit Center.
- The service will cost the same as a Metro bus ride.
- Service design, including service area and hours, will be based on budget and feedback from the community conducted through the Federal Way Link extension engagement process.
