

King County “I Speak” Cards

The toolkit includes an “I Speak” card for consumers to bring with them when seeking care, which identifies the language they speak, and a “Know Your Rights” text to inform both consumers and providers regarding the use of interpreter services.

About King County “I Speak” Cards

King County Office of Equity and Social Justice offers a collection of materials about consumer rights and how to obtain language services in the 36 most-commonly spoken languages in King County.

By law, institutions must provide language access services to individuals who are Limited English Proficient (LEP). As a recipient of federal funds, King County government is required to provide reasonable language access at no cost. These laws are meant to provide all people with equal access to public services, programs and activities.
