As your Metropolitan King County Council, we oversee the second largest government and the most populous county in Washington State. With over 2.27 million residents, King County is the 12th largest county in the United States in terms of population. There are more people living in King County than in 15 states! At 2,130 square miles, the county covers more territory than the states of Rhode Island or Delaware.

Our dedicated employees provide quality regional services every day to county residents. We are also the local government for approximately 246,000 people who live in unincorporated urban and rural areas, and we provide services by contract to many of the county's 39 cities.

As the legislative branch of county government, the council sets policies, enacts laws, and adopts budgets that guide an array of services, including:

- The criminal legal system of prosecutors and public defenders, District and Superior Courts, juvenile detention, and adult jails;
- The King County Sheriff's Office, which directly serves residents of unincorporated areas and contracts with many cities to provide police protection;

- Public health and human services;
- Metro Transit bus service, Water Taxi, King County International Airport (Boeing Field), and county roads;
- Wastewater treatment and solid waste management;
- Regional parks, open space, and trails; and
- Elections, records, and licensing.

Each of the nine members of the King County Council represents a geographical district averaging about 252,000 residents. Councilmembers are elected on a non-partisan basis and serve four-year terms.

The council has several standing committees that oversee specific functions of county government and a Committee of the Whole that includes all councilmembers. They also work closely with elected officials from local jurisdictions on three regional committees that address common interests in matters of policy, transit, and water quality.

The council's review of ordinances, motions, and budgets help ensure that county government operates in an efficient, transparent, and cost-effective manner, with equal access for all county residents.

Message from the Council Chair and overview of the county budget

Claudia Balducci, Chair

At the King County Council, we work together across geographic and political lines to get things done for you, our constituents. Although we represent very different parts of the county, we all share a common commitment to our constituents: to provide excellent services, advance equity and social justice, and make King County a place where everyone can thrive.

The King County Council will continue to operate virtually until public health experts determine we can again gather indoors safely. When we return to the Courthouse, we will retain some changes we instituted due to the pandemic, including the option for virtual public comment. Allowing people to participate remotely, rather than having to drive to downtown Seattle, has increased the number of people who provide comment and the quality of that comment. Going forward, we want to preserve this valuable tool for hearing from our constituents.

The past two years have tested the Council, as it has tested everyone around the globe. Amid these challenging times, we have seen what we can do when we work together toward a common goal with urgency. I hope you will join us in building on what we've learned during the pandemic as we continue to do the important work of the people of King County in 2022.

Understanding the county budget

King County's operating budget is composed of two types of funds: dedicated funds and the General Fund. Dedicated funds are the largest portion, accounting for 83% of the total operating budget. By law, these funds are restricted to specific purposes, such as transit, sewage treatment, and voter-approved programs like regional Emergency Medical Services.

The discretionary portion of the county's operating budget is the General Fund, which amounts to 17% of the total operating budget. These funds pay for critical day-to-day services not supported by other revenues. Almost three quarters of the General Fund (72%) goes to pay for criminal justice and public safety, as mandated by the state. The remainder must fund other services, such as elections and human services (see pie chart).

The General Fund is supported mostly by property tax, sales tax, and fees. By law, King County collects property taxes on behalf of all taxing districts within the county. However, the county receives only 17 cents of every property tax dollar, with the rest going to other agencies (see bar graph). Similarly, the county receives less than one cent of the sales tax of 10 cents per dollar collected in most of the county.

Since Washington State enacted the 1% cap on property tax increases, counties across our state have faced a gap between revenue and the cost of providing services. This structural gap has resulted in the General Fund being cut by several hundred million dollars, with consequent reduction in services to county residents.

The funding gap has been exacerbated by the economic slowdown due to the COVID-19 pandemic. For example, despite some recovery in 2021, sales tax revenues are not forecasted to attain pre-pandemic levels until 2023. The ongoing pandemic creates some uncertainty over the forecast of the General Fund meeting its targeted balance for the next biennium. The Council will review and adopt the county's biennial budget this fall.

Council committees and meetings

The King County Council reviews proposed legislation through standing committees that oversee specific government functions. Councilmembers also work closely with elected officials from local jurisdictions on three regional committees that address common interests in policy, transit, and water quality. They also serve as the Board of Supervisors for the King County Flood Control District, a special-purpose government. Additionally, individual councilmembers serve on a variety of external committees, boards, and commissions, such as the Board of Health and the Sound Transit Board.

For more information on the committees, including descriptions, alternate members, and meeting agendas, please visit www.kingcounty.gov/council/committees.
