Countywide Planning Policies (CPPs)

Countywide Planning Policies (CPPs) are regulations that guide King County's growth and development. These policies are a key tool for ensuring that growth is sustainable and equitable for all community members.

Here’s a step-by-step breakdown of how CPPs work:

1. The Growth Management Planning Council (GMPC) sets the broad goals for King County's future development.

2. GMPC creates the Countywide Planning Policies (CPPs) to achieve these goals.

3. CPPs are reviewed and updated periodically to reflect changes in the county's needs and objectives.

4. The County Planning Board (CPB) approves the CPPs, and they become official policy for King County.

5. The CPPs guide how new buildings, roads, and other developments are planned and built.

6. The CPPs also include provisions for affordable housing, access to transportation, and other important community needs.

7. CPPs are enforced through local agencies and policies that implement the CPP provisions.

CPPs are updated periodically to reflect changes in the county's needs and objectives. For more information, visit the King County website at gmpc@kingcounty.gov.
